

Aviation industry reaffirms its commitment to safety and air connectivity in Colombia

17 October 2025 (Bogotá) – The International Air Transport Association (IATA) reaffirms its commitment to safety and air connectivity in Colombia, facilitating the sustainable development of the sector and contributing to the country's progress and its internal and global integration.

Aviation is the safest mode of transport. The industry and authorities collaborate by applying robust procedures and controls that ensure compliance with international standards and strengthen confidence in Colombian aviation. We will continue working to maintain and strengthen a safe, reliable system aligned with the standards of the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO).

Safety is the foundation of aviation and a fundamental commitment for all members of the ecosystem. IATA also collaborates with authorities to improve operational efficiency and the passenger experience, strengthening infrastructure, optimizing processes and systems, and facilitating connectivity and schedule compliance.

– IATA –

More information:

Corporate Communications – Latin America

Tel: +1-438-258-3155 or +1-514-240-4746

Email: ruedigerm@iata.org

Notes for editors:

- IATA (International Air Transport Association) represents around 350 airlines, accounting for 80% of global air traffic.
- Follow us on X to stay updated with industry news, policy opinions, and other useful information.
- Fly Net Zero.