AVIATION SECURITY MEETS SILICON VALLEY

The future aviation systems continues to be reinforced by next-generation thinking in the kind of transport services offered. Operators of manned aircraft and unmanned aerial systems (UAS) may ultimately share the same customer going forward but it is perhaps the unwavering commitment to maintaining extraordinarily high-levels of safety and security that will prove to be the mutual cornerstone of future success for all types of air transport.

New entrants utilizing low and high altitude continue to break tradition and offer unique air transport services that will ultimately integrate with conventional scheduled and chartered civil aviation. This high-level panel is an opportunity for an "...East meets West" exchange of ideas and challenges. Discussion will be premised upon the integrated approaches of safety and security, both the nexus of physical and digital operating within a highly regulated environment.
